RUSSIAN ROYALTY SCARED.

Body of Grand Duke Sergius Will Not Be Buried at Present.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20.—It has now been definitely decided that the remains of Grand Duke Sergius will not be brought to St. Petersburg for the present, but instead will be placed in a temporary receiving vault in the cloister of the Chaudoff monastery, to await the completion of the alterations now in progress in the Romanoff mausoleum in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, where the permanent interment will occur, among the tombs of his ancestors. On account of lack of space in the mausoleum it was decided last year to henceforth bury only rulers of the dynasty in the old mausoleum, and a new sepulchre in the new wing of the cathedral is now being built for other members of the imperial family. This, however, is not the only reason for the decision not to bring the remains to the capital now.

Even Governor General Trepoff has recognized the fact that no precautions can furnish an absolute guarantee of immunity against acts of terrorism and that a great state funeral, where ancient customs requires that the Emperor and all of the Romanoff family assemble and follow the coffin on foot, a single bomb might wipe out the whole dynasty. Regard for the personal safety of the sovereign also has led to the decision that the Emperor shall not go to Moscow to attend the funeral of his uncle. It is possible that no members of the imperial family will be present on that occasion except those who are now within the walls of the Kremlin. Grand Duke Constantine and Paul probably will represent the Emperor at the service. Constantine is personally popular, never having participated in the politics of the court, preferring to devote himself to science and the arts and his work as the head of the military academy. He went to Moscow immediately on receipt of the news of the assassination of Grand Duke Sergius.
